

AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Historian

This is a picture of George Washington, one of the leaders of the Revolution.

(<http://library.thinkquest.org/06aug/02455/pictures/Americanrevolution.jpg?>

A person who studies history would say that studying history is important because it helps us understand the past events that got us to where we are today. An important event that ties into the social science field of history is the American Revolution. This event was when the colonists went against the British to gain independence. The colonists triumphed, and became Americans in their own country. This event is important when we study history through the eyes of a historian because it shows us how we got to be our own country. If this revolution had never happened we may have never got to become independent.